Nuvo Sparkling Liqueur

A Bubbly Bottle of Booze That's Pretty in Pink

Written by Laura Mier

This bottle of Parisian alcohol looks exquisite enough to be a vial of perfume, but the blend of small-batch vodka and French sparkling wine infused with fruit nectar gives drinkers something even lovelier. With tiny effervescent bubbles and a brilliant pink color, the delicate flavor is like a garden party: fruity and floral with an unmistakably feminine elegance. Perfect for celebrating bachelorette parties, birthdays or just another fun weekend out with the girls, Nuvo is available at hotspots around town. Clubgoers can even order it as a bottle service option at Rok Vegas inside New York-New York. Enjoy over ice, as part of a cocktail or in a champagne flute.

Five Pink Drinks Worth Imbibing

Is it just us or have the French really cornered the market in pink liqueur? For more pink drinking, here are a few additional options to mix things up, French and otherwise.

Alizé Wild Passion Liqueur

This bottle boasts a mix of French Cognac, mango, passion fruit and pink grapefruit juices, and the salmon-pink liqueur goes well with everything from champagne to margaritas.

Banfi Rosa Regale

Enjoy this semi-dry, dark rose-colored sparkling wine for its aromatic bouquet of rose petals and raspberries, as well as for its versatility with food pairings.

Intrigue Pink Liqueur

For a passionate burst of fruit flavor, open a bottle of this brilliant pink alcohol: a combination of French vodka, Cognac and exotic passion fruits.

Wyder's Raspberry Cider

Although this fits into the beer category, this light, refreshing beverage tastes nothing like its bitter counterparts — more like a delicate raspberry punch with all the alcohol content of beer.

X-Rated Fusion Liqueur

A blend of French vodka, blood orange, mango and passion fruit juices, this bright pink liqueur is a kick of fruity freshness.
